

What could possibly have changed in Bolivia?

Could it be meals on wheels? Fresh chicken dinner from Pollo Moderno. Fresh chicken cooked over an open fire with rice, fried bananas, fried potatoes and that special sauce that everyone loves. The sauce comes in little plastic bags.

Jack Russell receiving our first order via moto, meals on wheels has arrived in Bolivia. Just download the APP, get connected to your favorite food place and wait for the delivery. My, my have we arrived or what?

Since the pandemic and people were staying home, a nice delivery system was developed. To find your house is even more interesting, not really GPS but some kind of pin location all done through your phone.

I think this picture could tell a couple of stories, but it looks like you have been disconnected! Or? You fill in the blanks.

In between visiting with several visitors and getting caught up with everyone, we do keep busy producing radio and video programs. I finally have the system down putting together some new programs for the Chimane women. Judy Burke has done a wonderful job preparing lessons for women. We are putting them together in a slideshow presentation. The audio track we can use on the radio and the slideshow can be put on their cell phones. Putting a program together involves a lot of pieces that you need to fit together. Once the pieces are all made and in order the rest seems like a piece of cake.

Beautiful blue birds like bananas, there are actually three of them here. The one on the top is the lookout for the cat!

Thanks for your prayers, Bruce from the new room!
